

Gen. Daniel Brodhead marched his troops north from Fort Pitt in western Pennsylvania, but plans to join Sullivan's troops were aborted by supply difficulties. Brodhead conducted a series of raids in the west instead.

Gen. John Sullivan led his soldiers north from Easton through the Poconos and Tobyhanna Township, while Gen. George Clinton brought his troops from eastern New York to meet up with Sullivan at the New York-Pennsylvania line.